Services for W. Bank, Gaza increase Israel's

TEL AVIV, Aug. 16 (R). — The Israeli government faced financial problems today with its controversial measures to improve public services in occupied Arab lands -- measures widely denounced as creeping

Among the first of the new measures to be announced was a programme of loans for the renewal of local bus fleets in the West Bank and Gaza strip. This was accompanied by a plan to introduce voluntary health insurance in both areas.

In addition the government said Arab workers in Gaza and Sinai would be protected by new regulations bringing their working conditions in line with those covering Israeli workers.

AMMAN (J.T.). — Al Ra'i newspaper reported Tuesday that the Israeli occupation authorities had started preparation for setting up four new settlements in the Golan Heights, in addition to the currently existing 20 settle-

The paper added that the Israeli authorities were also planning a big town to home 10,000 inhabitants in the same area.

The government has not so far announced the cost of the schemes but while two of the three plans announced will incur little direct cost to the government the bus loans could mean a heavy bill for Israel's

Most economic experts here agree that the overall program-Israel's already debt-ridden treasury.

Newspapers in Israel today said the move was clearly political in nature rather than based on the best possible use of Israeli budget funds.

A pro-government paper said the measures 'will make for greater understanding between Israel and the Arab population" but the independent Haaretz said that by tackling the problem by such means "the government is trying to deepen our involvement in the lives of the Arabs. This is not the way to preserve Israel's character as a Jewish state or to enhance its security."

In Beirut one diplomat commented on Mr. Begin's reference to Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) that "as far as Israeli terminology is concerned the West Bank is already annexed." Mr. Begin insists that Israel has historic rights there "so it stands to reason that he would take the lot over not only in word but also in

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim today urged all governments and parties concerned in the Middle East conflict to refrain from any moves likely to heighten tension or affect efforts to resume negotiations. His statement, relayed through a spokesman, was in response to Israel's decision to extend various government ser-vices to the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

The U.N. spokesman said Mr. Waldheim, who is in Aust-cial text of the Israeli decision.

"Therefore, at this stage, he wishes only to express the view wishes only to express the view that all governments and parties conceroed in the Middle East conflict should refrain from any moves which might heighten tension or affect the current efforts to resume the negotiating process in the Middle East. dle East.

"Moves which contravene the spirit or the letter of the U.N. resolutions on the Middle East should particularly be avoided," the statement concluded.

In Kuwait Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al Ahmad said today that Israel's decision to expand public services for Arabs in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank was flagrant challenge to U.N. resolutions" on the Middle East,

He told reporters that Israel was giving the world new proof that it was bent on expansion and aggression".

The PLO newspaper Falestin Al Thawra said today that the organisation would raise the Israel decision at next month's meeting of the United Nations general assembly in New York.

The Israeli move, Falestin

Al Thawra said, was in line with intensified efforts towards further expansion of Israeli te-rritory since Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his rightwing Likud Party came to power last May.
"We in the PLO are firm in our decision to intensify our military struggle in every part and on every inch of our home-land," the paper said.

Syria today appealed to "all countries and international or-ganisations" to denounce Israel's decision to apply its law to the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

An official spokesman said the Israeli decision was aimed at "consecrating the occupation in readiness for the definitive annexation" of the West Bank

WELCOME FRIEND -- Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev greets Yugoslav'e Marshall Tito who arrived for a "friendship visit" to the Soviet Union Tuesday. (AP wirephoto).

Soviets expected to allay Yugoslav fears during Tito's Moscow visit

MOSCOW, Aug. 16 (Agencies).

— Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito arrived today for an "official friendship visit", to the Soviet Union and was welcomed with a bear-hug and kisses from Soviet President and Communist Party chief Mr.

Leonid Brezhnev. He will stay there until Aug. 23, on the first leg of a three week tour that will take bim to North Korea and China.

Marshal Tito, 85, was accompanied by his wife, Foreign Minister Milos Minic, Yugoslav Communist Party Executive Secretary Stane Dolanc and other officials.

Observers noted that Premier -Alexei Kosygin was not present to welcome the visitors. nor important members of the Marshal Tito, 85, and Mr.

Brezhnev, 70, who also holds Marshal's rank, both seemed fit. Mr. Brezhnev bas just spent more than a month io the Crimea. He seemed to be in much better form than when he went to Paris last June.

The two beads of state, both in civilian dress, reviewed a guard of honour as national authems were played.

The two then got into a car for the drive to the Kremlin, where Marshal Tito Is to stay until Friday morning.

The "People's welcome" organised by Soviet authorities appeared to match the usual Soviet greeting for "friendly" foreign chiefs of state, observers agreed. Thousands of Muscovites, organised in delegations, lined Lenin Avenue and Dimitrova Street, waving Soviet and Yugoslav flags and pictures of the two leaders as well as banners hailing cooperation among the two peoples and nations. Some signs were written in Serb and Soviet television broadcast live the welcoming ceremony at the airport and the cortege tbrough Moscow.

Marshal Tito is scheduled to attend an official dinner at the Kremlin this evening after receiving from Mr. Brezhnev the Order of the October Revolution for his "exceptional contribution" to the struggle for October ideals. The Soviet Union is expected to renew a pledge of noninterference in the affairs of fiercely independent Yugoslavia during the week-long visit by President Tito.

The last meeting between the veteran Communist leader and Mr. Brezhnev nine months ago was marred by ellegations from Belgrade that President Tito was put under pressure to modify his Maverick policy and work more closely with Mos-

Yugoslavia has since been alarmed by Soviet propaganda attacks on Spanish communist leader Santiago Carrillo -- reviving memories of the way President Tito was denounced neary 30 years ago by Josef

As a result, observers expect an effort by Soviet leaders to stress the positive elements in Moscow-Belgrade relations and allay Yugoslav concern. The Kremlin has already hinted that President Tito can expect renewed Soviet pledges of respect for the key principles of sovereignty and non-interference in Yugoslavia's affairs. A recent commentary by the

The commentary referred to "strict observance of the principles of sovereignty, independence (and) non-interference in each other's internal affairs". An article in the government newspaper Izvestia yesterday said the talks between the two leaders had become "a remar-kable tradition making possible both the development of bilateral relations and the solution of a wide range of international problems". On several international is-

Both countries favour resumption of the Geneva peace conference, with Palestinian participation, to bring about a Middle East peace settlement -and both want to see an end to the fighting in the Horn of Africa between Ethiopia and Somalia.

On these issues Mr. Brezh-nev would clearly welcome support for the Kremlin line from Yugoslavia, which is influential among non-aligned Both leaders also take the view that the October meeting in Belgrade to review progress of the 1975 Helsinki agreement on European security should concentrate on the positive aspects of the Helsinki accord. Neither' country wants the human rights issue to dominate the talks. The Yugoslav leader apparentiv shares Soviet distaste for President Carter's human rights campaign.

NAIROBI, Aug. 16 (Agencies)

— Ethiopia today reported its air force was in action against concentrations of Somali tanks and trucks in the Rift Valley east of Addis Ababa and said Somalla was making final pre-parations for "all-out war."

The Ethiopian News Agency (ENA), in a despatch received bere, said two Somali MIG-17 jets were shot down last Thursday as they flew over an Ethiopian missile battery at Aysha near the border with Djibouti and Somalia on the edge of the Bift Valley of the Rift Valley.

The Valley lies some 400 kms. north of the Ogaden desert, which is under the control of Somali-backed guerrillas after three weeks of war.

On Friday, Saturday and Sunday Ethiopian jets destroy-ed "numerous" tanks, a bulldozer, a fuel tanker and S trucks and landrovers, some of them carrying "combat-ready tro-

The agency said the vehicles were hit near the railway and road which run along the edge of the valley from Dire Dawa, the main town in eastern Ethiopia, and the Djibouti border.

The radio stations of both countries reported bundreds of troops killed in clashes in the Rift Valley last week but to-day's ENA report was the first to indicate a major buildup of Somali armour and other war vehicles in the area. A first batch of about 135,000 Ethiopian militiamen, drawn almost exclusively from the peasantry, is already in service along the Somali border and in Eritrea to the north, the agency said. Meanwhile international efforts to end the fighting continue. President Bongo of Gabon, Chairman of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU), yesterday said he would ask the U.N. Security Council to send peace-keeping troops to Ethiopia unless there was an immediate eod to the fighting.

East Germany, an active backer of Ethiopia, today said Somalia and Ethiopia should set aside their differences and fight "imperialism and reac-

Cargo was unloaded at Djibouti after the Ethiopian port of Assab, 200 kms. north of here, became clogged. Some sources said that Assah, linked by road with Addis Ababa, is being used essentially for unloading

Port of Aqaba expansion plan to go ahead

After much hesitation By Rami G. Khouri reached on the basis of the Special to the Jordan Times original figure of JD 17.3 mil-

Final agreement has been reached between the Jordanian government and the joint veoture of Tarmac-Shahin to carry out the full four-berth expansion project for the port of Agaba.

Seoior Jordanian sources involved in the project have told the Jordan Times that Tarmac Limited of Great Britain and Shahin Engineering and Con-tracting Company of Amman have agreed to carry out the full expansion scheme at the original price agreed upon last October -- JD 17.3 million.

The agreement will be signed this month, and follows nearly a year of hesitation on the part of the Jordanian government about carrying out the full pro-ject. The hesitation was prompted by uncertainty about whether the new capacity is required in view of the vastly increased efficiency and handling capacity of the port, and also by uncertainty about financing.

The government has finally decided to go ahead with the full expansion - - which includes four new general cargo be-rths oorth of the two existing berths, two roll-on roll-off points, two lighterage berths and general storage, cold storage and transit areas.

The Saudi Arabian government bas agreed to finance ha-lf the cost of the project, or JD 8.65 million, in the form of a long-term loan.

Last month Tarmac-Shahin submitted a revised cost figure of JD 18.778 million, which was promptly rejected by the government as unnecessarily high. Now agreement has been lion as indicated in last year's letter of intent for the contract. But there have been some aojustments made in favour of Tarmac-Shahin, including a larger advance payment from the government and lower performance bond and retention money figures. After a three-month mobili-sation period, site work is expected to start in December, with completion due in 30 months' time, or June 1930. Consultants for the expansion project are Parsons, Brown and Newton of the U.K. and Jouzy and Partners of Amman. The government has also decided to go ehead with the construction of a separate berth to handle potash exports from Agaba. This oerth will be located south of the existing phosphate berths, and will handle exports of potash expec-ted to materialise from the Dead Sea project by 1981, according to present olans.

Terms of reference for the potash berth are now being drawn up, and consultancy bids will be requested shortly, according to the sources. It is anticipated that the potash berth, when not being used for exports, will also be brought into service to receive cargo at Aqaba.

Thus with the four new perths, the two new floating berths, the existing two berths and the potash berth, Aqaba port will sport nine berths by the early 1980's, and this should considerably enhance its prospects of being a major transit port in the 1980's and 1990's, for such states as lraq, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

What's in a label?

The Soviet Union is finally groping its way out of the quandary in which it found itself as a result of the conflict between its friends in the Horn of Africa. It has accused Somalia of invading Ethiopia and is loudly lamenting the imminent dismemberment of its preferred ally Ethiopia.

Yet it is not "progressive" Ethiopia that is threatened by dismemberment but the ramshackle Ethiopian empire, a legacy of colonialism. Ethiopia has not had time to mature as a progressive state, the professed ideologies of the juvenile band of soldiers ruling Addis Ababa notwithstanding. The shaky masters of Ethiopia cannot claim the loyalty of the diverse ethnic groups that went into the makeup of the old empire, nor can they lay better claim to that loyalty in view of their actions.

The inhabitants of Western Somalia or southern Ethiopia are a coherent ethnic group who share the same culture and traditions as their kith and kin to the south in the neighbouring state of Somalia. Their struggle, irrespective of whether they are backed by the armed forces of Somalia, is a demand for selfdetermination. Can the Kremlin ignore that fact?

Can the Kremlin lament the breakaway of Eritrea, given its previous support for the Eritrean liberation movements? Can the Soviet Union so easily reverse its previous stand just because the ruling Derg in Addis Ababa has paid verbal homage to Marxism?

The Kre n is espousing a self-compromising theme by fav ring untried "progressives" over tried and true libe: .ion movements. Does a liberation movement ceas to be one once the central authority, against which it is fighting, changes its complexion from "reactionary" to "progressive"? Are not the objective factors the same? Has oppression ceased? Is Eritrea any freer than it was under Haile Selassie? Does it have less cause to want to regain its independence? On does the Soviet Union want us to believe that its own ambitions in the Horn of Africa are justified by the fact that the new regime in Addis Ababa claims o be progressive?

A label does not transform, Mengistu Haile Mariam is no more justified in killing Eritreans and Somalis to enforce their loyalty than Emperor Haile Selassie was.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

AL AKHBAR, on Tuesday, criticised the way certain people fast Ramadan. Some families view Ramadan in a way diametrically opposed to the religious intentions behind the ritual of fasting this month; they consider it an occasion to indulge their appetites in amounts, and kinds of food they would never consume at any other time of year. Consequently, food budgets of some families double, or even triple, during Ramadan with the result that these families are landed in financial debts they are unable to meet for the rest of the year. Ramadan's spending sprees, also, have an unhealthy effect on the nation's economy because the rise in demand produces a rise in prices and, naturally, an economic imbalance.

AL RAT wondered at the explanation provided by Israel's governmental spokesman concerning the latest Israell move on the status of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The spokesman denied that the move constitutes an annexation and added that the decision does not "alter the legal status" of these areas. "legality" referred to by tha spokesman can only be that of the law of the jungle. Israel attacks, occupies, and by force of arms, kills, evicts and Imprisons those who oppose its occupation of a land which it alters socially, economically and culturally. Finally, Israel annexes this land saying that its action cannot be considered an annexation since "no people could aunex what belongs to them" but, merely, Israel finds itself

"concerned" about the "legal status" of this land's inhabi-

AL DUSTOUR said that the Israeli move can be seen as a realisation of Premier Menachem Begin's declared view that the occupied Arab terri-tories are "liberated" Israeli lands. But the problem is no longer that of Israell aggres-sion but of American laxity in putting a stop to actions which are clearly against all efforts for peace. The U.S. has made it plain that it is determined to bring about peace in the area, in which case it is required to act and act in an effective way, otherwise the current peace initiative will end up being nothing more than ' 'peace talk" AL SHA'B said tha Israeli move produced nothing new in view of the declared refusal to withdraw from the occupled territories. The Important thing now is an adequate Arab response to this challenge, a response which will rise up to the level of the historical necessity of defeating both this annexation plan and the intransigence of Israel, now

Director of women's affairs states

Two-year community colleges promise gains for women

Mrs. I'nam Mufti has been Director of the newly-established Department of Women's Affairs since February 1977. In a recent interview with the Jordan Times. Mrs. Mufti stressed the efforts being exerted to integrate women into a predominantly male-oriented society so that the potential labour force can be fully utilised in the development process the country is undergoing.

By Marian Awwad Special to the Jordan Times

Two-year community colleges will soon be a part of the educational opportunities avallable to the people of Jordan. Construction will begin next month on a community college in Amman, which will open its doors in September 1978.

Mrs. I'nam Mufti made this announcement to a group of 10 women professors from the United States... who are on a six-week tour of Jordan. She stated that Her Highness Princess Sarvath, working with local women, has promoted the idea as part of the community approach to offering women, in addition to opportunities for furthering their education close to home. This is envisioned as being the first of a number of community colleges to be patterned on successful programmes in other countries, but tailored to sult the needs of Jordan's five-year plan has made it obvious that the country needs its total work force. Mrs. Mufti stated: "Although the government has plans to promote and maintain labour, it must fill the labour gap. As a result, the government, economists and educators are turning to women. Closing the gap in social development depends on women and, economically speaking, women working with men,"

With Jordan's economic and social development moving so quickly, the role which women can and should play has come to the forefront. She continued: "There is a shortage of manpower due to three basic factors: 50 per cent of the population of Jordan is below 15 years of age; many skilled and well-trained people are leaving the country; and women's participation stands at very low level."

Mrs. Mufti explained the esablishment of the Department of Women's Affairs within the Ministry of Labour. "Last year's Symposium on the Role of Women in Development pas-sed many resolutions for the advancement and integration of women into the work force. It considered women at home, at work and the importance of preparing them for full participation in the economic and social development of Jordan.

"One of the resolutions established the Department of Women's Affairs to ensure the implementation of recommendations and plans drawn up for the advancement of wo-

The department became a reality in February 1977, with Mrs. Mufti as Director. Its work was clear cut: "The integration of women into the development of Jordan, both economically and socially. The director made a reference to the fact that women make up one-half of the ponulation of Jordan. "There is so much potential which has not yet been tapped. This department will act as an initlator and a clearing house for programmes, and a coordinator in the implementation of plans for women's development."

In planning the activities of her department, Mrs. Muftl has consulted specialists and edu-cators. She and her staff are now developing a documenta-tion centre, which will include valuable information on women -- from a local and international point of view. From this data, targets will be set for womeo to meet, concerning their own growth and development, as well as the attainment of national goals.

One of the priorities will be the training and education of women who are already in the work force. She asserted: "We are especially keen nn upgrading women involved in technicai work."

Another priority will be the opening up of opportuoities for younger women in non-traditional fields. This, it is thought, will ultimately lead to a growth in the national in-

REGIONAL WOMEN'S MEETING PLANNED

AMMAN (JNA). -- The Department of Women's Affairs . is planning a regional conference in Amman to draw up principles to strengthen the position of Arab women so they can ef-fectively contribute to national development.

The department's Director, Mrs. Ppam Muftl, said that contacts were being made with the United Nations and other agencies to hold tha conference in Amman next March.

Mrs. Mufti reiterated the importance of the department by saying; "Our set-up is an entirely new concept in this part of the world. We have the support and backing of His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan, who greatly believes in the importance of integrating women into the development of this country. We have the support and backing of the government, the private sector ... essentially everyone. Most important, we have the backing of women, whose in-terests we have at beart, in changing society and a developing country. We want to help the Jordanian woman take her rightful place in so-ciety. We feel that our movement is more or less comp-

She emphasised the importance of education in prepar-ing women for the future. "Only through education can romen become emancipated. Until recently, educational op-portunities in Jordan were very limited. "Presently, 46 per cent of pupils enrolled in the compul-sory level of education (classes 1-9) are girls. When we talk about the secondary level, we see that there are a number of drop-outs, which lowers the ratio." She continued: "For those girls who complete the secondary cycle, a very small percentage have the opportunity to continue their higher education. But opportunities for those completing their secondary level are increasing. Today, almost 40 per cent of the student body of Jordan'a two universities are women, Fifteen years ago, it was only 15 per cent." According to Mrs. Mufti, women have begun to move into all types of work. While they were previously pursuing higher studies in the arts, their numbers are now on the increase in the sciences. She added that higher education is not reserved just for young women. Quite a number of older women are now taking advantage of the opportunities.

'The trend nowadays is taking women into all fields. There is a growing need for women to enter technical and vocational training as she said.

Mrs. Mufti discussed the needs of rural women: "Women in villages, in particular, need help. When we analyse the female work force in Jordan, wa find that 78 per cent of the working women live in Amman and Zarqa. Until recently, the figure was 97 per

She stressed: "We need to encourage, train and provide essential services for them, and open offices to help them. Community centres with attached day-care centres could be used to help the women get out. They also need ways and means to facilitate their very heavy housework."

Jordan is a Moslem society. "Religion demands that every person, man or woman, seek education and knowledge. Long ago, women used to ma-nage their own business and affairs. Relatively recently, the history of this area caused all that to change. Traditional values and not religious values are now putting obstacles in our way." Unfairness on the job market is seen when men and women can frequently take the same type of job, but the possibilities of promoting for women are limited. This problem is not peculiar to Jor-dan," she stated, "but is pos-sibly more acute here. Women are not being given the chance to become decision-makers."

She also considers it unfair for a woman to have two jobs -- one outside the home and one inside. "We must work on changing the attitudes and values of our society, which thinks that a woman's place is only in the home and that a man never does housework. Inflation and the increasing needs of development are putting pressure on society to change.

The Shah shuffles cabinet as development projects lag

By Ibrahim Noori TEHRAN (R). — Dr. Jamshid Amouzegar, formerly Iran's top oil oegotiator who has now been made prime minister, will oeed all his skill to tackle the country's urgent de-

His priorities, as listed by the Shah, include, housing, in-flation, manpower, education and, above all, coordinated development policy involving a reasonable rate of growth. Also, the Plan and Budget Organisation (PBO), which or-

Dr. Jamshid Amouzegar, Iran's new prime minister.

The reason for the major government shake-up is an official secret, although warnings of the impending change were sounded in the usually muted parliament two weeks before the axe fell on former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveyda and his cabinet recen-

Deputy Gholam Reza Akhlagpur, from the oil city of Abadan, told parliament: "The government has faced defeats in most of its programmes and

"We must concede that the government has lost control of things. The miserable condition of water, education, agriculture, industry have all led 10 irreparable damages to the national economy," the deputy

Actually, the problems be-gan with the quadrupling of nil prices in 1973. With increased oil income, the amount of direct capital investment in the five-year development plan ending oext March 20, was increased from $39 billion to $69

The steady march of the previous years became a gallop to achieve the Shah's cherished "great civilisation" by the end of the ceotury when plans to be among the five most advanced countries of the wor-

Too many projects were started too sooo and at the same time, and, as it became clear later, without taking into full account the requirements of infrastructure, management, energy and manpower. Emphasis on industrialisation, combined with the spread of electrical home appliances and other amenities and inadequate power aupply, resulted in a power shortage last winter.

The shortage became critical this summer, forcing the government to introduce daily power cuts lasting five hours or more, seriously affecting industry, social services and business

Although the government has oot revealed a full account of losses inflicted by development problems so far. it re-ported recently that the Arak Aluminium factory had suffered a loss of over $7 million and 11 metal foundries.

Factories were advised last month to install their own generators and to bring forward their workers' holidays to reduce demand for electricity in summer. The Central Bank of Iran renorted that the construction boom raised wages and attracted labour away from aericulture, which led to a drop in farm production.

As land prices rocketed, rents and house prices also rose beyond the means of averageincome groups. Housing berame Iran's number one pro-government imported engineers, doctors, nurses, teachers, technicians and truck drivers to meet the increasing need for manpower. Massive imports clogged the country's inadequate ports. Increased imports of cars and migration from the villages to the capi-tal created traffic and other problems.

However the previous gov-ernment publicly claimed these problems were not too serious and were surmountable. But the Shah's patience began to run out last October.

He asked Mr. Hoveyda to give up his acting post of Gen-eral Secretary of Rastakhiz, Iran's only political party. to Dr. Amouzegar.

Early in November, Mr. Hoveyda, acting on the Shah's orders, introduced changes in the Ministries of Labour, Education, Roads and Transport and Agriculture, a few days after the monarch set up an imperial commission to investigate and check wastages and delays in development projects. The ministers of co-operatives and rural affairs and agriculture were merged.

Last February, Mr. Hoveyda replaced his ministers of higher education and science and energy, they were among 11 ministers dropped. The most important change was to put Mohammad Yeganeb, also an oil expert, at the head of the PBO, replacing Dr. Abdul Majid Majidi.

Dr. Amouzegar himself has not taken any additional cabi-net portfolios, keeping his net portfolios, keeping his hands free to supervise as prime minister his ministers. He has also given up his party job and said that he would be too busy to attend future OPEC conferences.

The new government will have a hard time dealing with the existing problems, but its success is essential for the sixth development plan.

The Shah told the cabinet "there are reasons why we should not pursue the task of development in the manner of the past," and suggested that the growth rate should 'be reasonable, digestable, and one that does not trigger a back-

Jamaica begins debate on bringing common people into running the country

Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica has launched a programme of constitutional reform which aims to bring the people more fully into the running of the country. For 18 mon-ths plans for change will be discussed in the villages and towns and the final programme will be put to a referendum. The new constitution will, among other things, turn Jamaica into a repub-

By Cedric Lindo

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Gemini) — în recent years Jamaica has made news in the world with stories of crimes of violence and the imposition of an island-wide state of emergency which was lifted last May after eleven months.

But this small island may now be about to attract more attention by the growth of "people power" in it, the direct participation in decision-making by the ordinary people, the

The cabinet appointed after the general election of last December included a minister of national mobilisation with the duties of, in the words of Prime Minister Michael Manley, "supervising the democratisation programme in educatioo, community councils and worker participation and maintaining a constant dialogue between government and the people through the mobilisatioo of popular opinion in the party and the natioo."

These words did not, for a time, seem to be carried out in any practical way. But now the prime minister has launched a constitutional reform programme which brings the ordinary

Before announcing the emergency production plan a few months ago the prime minister had invited suggestions from people, and it has been said that 9.000 people sent in suggestions. This participation in changing the constitution is on a much more organised scale.

The process is to last two years, with the first 18 months spent in "mass reasoning" in villages and towns throughout Jamaica, Mr. Maoley emphasised that not one in a thousand Jamaicans knew about the present constitution which was 'yer the basic rule and law on which the people stood every day."

The people are now being asked to help to produce "a democratic and truly people's constitution," though the implication that the present constitution was not one designed for the people has taken many by surprise.

It was devised before independence by a committee of 17, nine from the majority perty (then, as now, the People's National Party), eight from the opposition Jamaica Labour Party and the attorney general who then held a post which was non-political.

Leading the majority party was Norman Manley, father of the present prime minister, and leading the minority was Sir Alexander Bustamante, who has just died in his 94th year. The two are sole holders of the title National Hero of Jamaica.

It would appear that these are oow regarded as reactionaries who imposed an antipeople constitution on the country, though Michael Manley stresses that constitution had only 31 days consideration by the people and the new one will be considered for two years before a referendum.

This proposed consultation with and by the people is straight out of the book of neighouring Cuba's Fidel Castro.

The parliamentary secretary in the Ministry of Justice with responsibility for constitutional reform, said public debate will be cooducted at the level of local communities (ie. villages) and monitored at the community, parish and regional levels in order to ensure that citizens from all strata of society have opportunity to express their ideas fully.

In an address at the speech day of a high school near Kingston Mrs. Beverley Manley, wife of the prime miniater, said that the constitution as it now stands was rigid and inflexible and that "on the road to self-reliance" Jamaica should take a detailed look at it as in its present form it was extremely difficult to bring about fundamental changes at the right pace.

The opposition says it will take no part in this and will not accept the invitation of the prime minister to meet the Constitutional Reform Division of the Ministry of Justice. It claims that it regards electoral reform as a matter of urgency and not one which can await general reform of the constitution. The opposition claims that the last general election was rigged.

How Jamaica will respond to this attempt to get the opinions of everyone is not yet certain, the public being more concerned at the present time with the economic slump and the shortage of many imported items oow prohibited under the government's strict limitatioo of imports.

But the idea of being given an opportunity to take part in decisioo-making is attractive and should, at the very least, ensure increased popularity for Michael Manley's govern-

Another CIA official, Mr. Douglas Diamond, told the panel one agency consultant believed "massive infusions" of technology and investment, from the United States and Western Europe would be needed to enable the Russians to extract oil from increasingly bostile environments.

Admiral Turner said Moscow would be under great pressure to force Eastern Europe, which bought a million barrels of Soviet oil a day in 1976, to share the burden of the shortages, but it would bave to consider the danger of worsening Eastern Europe's economic situation and undermining its political stability.

Admiral Turner also said the CIA estimated that Soviet defence spending would continue to increase into the 1980s at an annual rate of four or five per cent.

Under questioning, he said the percentage of the Soviet gross national product devoted to defence had shown an increase in CIA estimates "not because their defence programmes are larger than we thought but because the efficiency of the defence sector of their industry is much less than we had believed."

The United States, he said, remained well ahead in military technology.

He added: "With brute force techniques, however, they do achieve about the same end result in many areas that we do with much more sophisti-cated techniques." and standby fares of $146

Israelis find signs of oil in northern Sinai, Gulf of Suez

TEL AVIV, Aug. 16 (R). - Israeli prospectors have found en couraging signs of oil in drill holes in northern Shai and the Gulf of Suez, the government announced yesterday. Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai told a press conference the finds should not be regarded as definitive indications of oil in workable quantities, but they would encourage the government to invest further sums in prospecting.

Ms. Modal said gas pressure in a bore near the northern Sinal casis of El Arish had been very strong and a promising hole has been drilled in the Guif of Suez.

Another drill hole at Rafah, at the southern end of the occupied Gazz strip, also showed probles, the minister said.

PEKING, Aug. 16 (AFP). — Just one week before the visit to China of U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the official Chinese press yesterday described the United States as a decadent society afflicted by drug abuse and crime.

The New China News Agency, reporting on the problems of American society and its youth in particular, said that teen-age drug abuse, alcoholism and crime were at an "all time high", attributing this disclosure to the authority of "many U.S. bourgeois journ-

The New China News agen-cy quoted these same journals as saying marijuana was commonplace in metropolitan school systems, a major problem in junior high schools and a growing one in elementary gr-

Observers noted that President Jimmy Carter has spoken in favour of legalising the use of marijuana. The Chinese agency said that a big rise in drinking among teen-agers showed that alcohol had begun to replace drugs as a principal means of escape for young people.

Quoting U.S. official figures, the agency said that teeo-age crime had always been a major social problem in the Unlted States but had become graver in the past few years and school vandalism alone was costing the nation $600 million a year in repairs.

The New China News Agency concluded that drug abuse and increasing suicides among American teen-agers were not due only to "family break-ups as well as press and televisioo information about sex, violence and crime," but that the fundamental cause was the decadent cepitalist system itself.

Normalisation

Mr. Vance files to Peking for discussions on the difficult question of normalising U.S. relations with People's China. At present the United States has an embassy in Taipel, where it is the only major power to continue to recognise the Nationalist Republic of China.

U.S. relations with the Chinese Communists are conducted through a U.S. Liaison Office in Peking and a similar Chinese representation exists in Wash-

A leading American ainologist, Doak Barnett of the Brookings Institute, believes the time has come for the U.S. to bite the builet in its relations with the Chinese Communists.

Mr. Barnett believes that, if President Carter does not take positive steps towards normalising relations with Peking, there will be a progressive de-terioration in the situation that has existed between the two countries since President Nix-on signed the Shanghai Communique in 1972.

Taiwan's problem

When Secretary Vance flies into the Chinese capital on Aug. 22, it is likely he will be with an uncompromising set of demands, at least on the surface.

The Chinese Communists have repeatedly stated that before normalisation can be achieved the U.S. must sever its diplomatic relations with the Chinese Nationalists, withdraw all forces and military installations from 'Telwan and the Taiwan Straits, and abrogate its mutual security treaty with the Nationalist regime.

The decision is not one that President Carter can take alone for at least some aspects of this package would require Congressional ratification. There is still a strong body of opinion in Congress favourable to the Chinese Nationalists and opposed to "abandoning" this iong-standing ally of the U.S.

Withdrawing the American defence umbrella from Taiwan would enevitably have reprecussions throughout the region and set governments from South Korea to South East Asia, including Japan, pondering the value of defence agreements

Progress towards normalisa-

tion during the Vance visit to Peking would thus depend to a large extent on what sort of assurances the Americans can obtain over Chinese Communist intentions to "liberate Taiwan".

Experts are generally agreed that the Chinese Communists at present lack the military strength to undertake an invasion of Taiwan, across the Taiwan Straits. However this may not always be the case if People's China embarks oo the modernisation of its armed forces advocated by the newly-rehabilitated Vice Premler Teng Hsiao-ping.

According to a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) report to Congress, China is building up its own strategic nuclear force but lags about 20 years behind the Soviet Union in weapons technology.

The report said most of China's arsenal was composed of weapons based on Soviet hardware of the 1950s, but the Chinese were developing in-ter-continental strategic missiles and might already have built a missile-firing submari-

China was furthest behind in planes, missiles. computers and electronics, the report declared.

For example, it sald, the Chinese were building a small number of MiG 21 aircraft, a Soviet-designed fighter produced in the 1950s. The CIA believes China has devoted between 8 and 10 per cent of its gross national product (GNP) to defence since 1972. The report added that the Chinese government was grannling with serious economic difficulties and its GNP had not risen last year. The new regime in Peking is giving priority to economic requirements, lo particular agri-culture and modernisation of industrial technology, it said. The withdrawal of American military personnel and installations from Taiwan would be a relatively simple matter as their numbers are very few and their presence mainly symbolic. But as a gesture it would be of considerable political importance, underlining the desire of the U.S. to normalise its relations with Pek-

Among the questions to be resolved during Mr. Vance's visit under the general heading of normalisation would be frozen in the United States and compensation for former U.S. property in China, the protection of the considerable American business investments in Taiwan, and what type of re-lationship the U.S. would be allowed to have with Taiwan once it had established an embassy in Peking.

Unofficial ties?

The model most frequently suggested for this relationship is the Japanese formula by which the Japanese maintain an unofficial agency in Taipei staffed by retired officials and continue their prosperous trading and touristic relations with the Nationalists. Officials in Taipei now seem to be more seriously alarmed about the future of their regime than at any previous time. for with President Carter in the White House it looks as if the United States is working un the political momentum to take the drastic sten of recoghising Communist China.

Whether the practical difficulties will stay, the president's hand will become more clear after Secretary Vance has completed his mission and gauged the reactions of the Communists in Peking.

One of the points to be determined is whether the Communists will abide by the letter of their uncommonising public declarations, or whether they will give the Americans nrivate assurances that they will not seek a solution to the Taiwan question by force.

HONG KONG, Aug. 16 (R). — Two Chinese pilots flew through the mushroom cloud of a hydrogen bomb blast last October to conduct scientific research and to prepare against any nuclear attack, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said today. "The airmen carried out a new test flight through the mushroom cloud to advance scientific research in national defence and prepare themselves against possible nuclear assaults by the superpowers," the agency said in a report monitored here. "Group Commander Pan Kuo-hsing and airman Sun Jung-hua took to the sky in their jet fighters and went through the various layers of nuclear cloud which were flamingo, orange, yellow and cream-white," the agency said. U.S. monitoring agencies reported last November that China had exploded a nuclear device equivalent to four million tons of TNT.
